Proponents of behaviorism believed that in order for psychology to be a respected science it should only concern itself with what can be seen and measured

Although the evaluative process is a continuous one and you will need to be general aware of what each youth is doing throughout the day

Learned behavior refers to actions response or reaction that an individual acquires through experience education and observations .

Anxiety is often a response to fear uncertainty or doubts we have about something that's causing us stress.

Anxiety taxes a trigger and turns it into bigger worries.

Anxiety disorders do not always occur for obvious reasons and are not always predictable responses.
